

THE GOOD BOOK CHALLENGE

<https://freedomined.org/Enhancing-Education/#good-books>

America's public K-12 schools should be filled with nonfiction books that are based on truth and fact, promote diversity of thought, expand the minds of our children, and push them to enhance their knowledge and understanding of the world, as well as nonfiction that allows them to escape to worlds that feed their imagination and creativity. The goal of the public school library is to enhance the curricular needs of the school. Schools across the nation are promoting community engagement; here is how you can make a difference to enhance education for the next generation!

TAKE ACTION.

We invite parents, grandparents and community members to ask your school to make the following pledge to procure books from our Good Book list below in their media centers and classroom libraries.

TAKE THE PLEDGE!

I will provide my local school's media center staff with the Freedom in Education Good Book List and respectfully request the media center staff secure as many of these books as possible to stock their shelves and display.

I will provide my school board and my school district Superintendent with the Freedom in Education Good Book List and request for them to procure this literature for each media center in the school district.

I will request that these Good Books be visibly displayed in my school's media center during Banned Books Week.

I will host a Liberty Story Hour where I read from a book on the Freedom in Education Good Book List.

I will provide the list of alternative book fair vendors to my school and school board.

I will ask parents, grandparents, and community members to donate books from the Freedom in Education Good Book List to schools.
